MANUAL

This Technical Manual contains the rules of the SUDAMERICAN ATHLETICS U18 - 2024 CHAMPIONSHIP, as well as all the information about its operation.

The information contained in this Manual may be modified by Atletismo Sudamericano or by the organisation.

Any modification will be informed through the official e-mails of the participating countries.

SAN LUIS

San Luis is part of the Nuevo Cuyo Region and is strategically located in the geographical centre of the Bioceanic Corridor that links the ports of Buenos Aires (Argentina) and Valparaíso (Chile).

Our territory, inhabited by various indigenous nations: Huarpes, Diaguitas, Comechingones, saw the arrival of the Spanish conqueror in the 16th century. The first province as a Cabildo city to adhere to the Revolutionary movement of May 1810.

In recent years, we have experienced a strong process of productive reconfiguration linked to the development of industrial activity, of which we are very proud.

TOURISM

The province of San Luis stands out for the diversity of its landscapes, natural and cultural attractions, infrastructure works and a full annual agenda of recreational activities, art, shows and sports. It has around 36,000 hotel beds and is characterised by its tourism offer based on sierras, rivers and dams, with eight tourist areas. These are: Sierras Centrales. This is the most traditional of the province's circuits, located in the foothills of the eastern slopes of the Sierras de San Luis. Its destinations and attractions are appreciated by tourists and locals alike, who seek out its streams and dams. It is made up of Juana Koslay, Potrero de los Funes, El Volcán, El Trapiche, La Florida, Estancia Grande, Valle de Pancanta, La Carolina, Paso del Rey and the City of San Luis as distribution centre.

The Comechingones Coast. This corridor is located on the western side of the Sierras de Los Comechingones, in the northeast extreme of San Luis. The interest of the area lies in the microclimate of Villa de Merlo as the main destination for provincial and national tourism with its wide range of hotels, gastronomy and services for excursions and related activities. To the south of the tourist locality and following the Provincial Route N° 1, we find Carpintería, Los Molles, Cortaderas, Villa Larca, Papagayos, Villa del Carmen and La Punilla, each one of them with its natural charms, waterfalls, dams and activities.

Northern Puntano. It starts in the City of San Luis and extends towards the north following the western slope of the Sierras de San Luis, among dams, rivers and high mountain roads. It is formed by the City of La Punta, Villa de La Quebrada, Nogolí, Villa General Roca, San Francisco del Monte de Oro, Leandro Alem, Luján, Candelaria y Lafinur.

Conlara Valley and San Martín. Between the Sierras de San Luis and the Sierras de Los Comechingones, in the northeast of the province, is located this wide valley crossed by the Conlara River, whose course runs from south to north. It is the environment to visit spas and dams, to go on trips to mining towns and to visit protected areas, museums and old chapels.

The department of San Martín, with its picturesque mountain villages, stands out for its stories of malones and pioneers, mineral wealth and traditional architectural heritage. Destinations: Naschel, Tilarao, Renca, Concarán, Santa Rosa del Conlara, Bajo de Véliz, San Martín and Las Chacras. Villa Mercedes and El Morro. Between mountains and plains, the region combines natural attractions, urban expressions and rural culture. Villa Mercedes, the second city in provincial importance, is identified by the Calle Angosta, the Quinto River and the Parque La Pedrera, an unprecedented sports and cultural mega project. The town of San José del Morro is pure history, in an enchanting environment whose main protagonist is its hill, born in remote volcanic times. La Toma, Capital of Marble Onyx offers mining experiences where you can learn about the origin and applications of the green veined onyx, a mineral pride of La Toma.

Traces of the Past. The area is located in the northwest sector of the territory of San Luis. The Sierras de Las Quijadas National Park is a natural scenery of singular rock formations of reddish tonality moulded by erosion. It treasures dinosaur fossil remains, geological records and archaeological sites of native cultures. In the lands of Guanacache, inhabits the Huarpe community (developed from the actions of the Government of San Luis) that maintains its cosmovision and customs, while La Calera is known for the extraction of limestone stones on a large scale.

Hot Springs and Salt Lakes. A few kilometres away from the City of San Luis are Balde and San Jerónimo, two centres of thermal waters recommended for their therapeutic benefits. The Salinas del Bebedero salt pans, make up an immense white landscape that shows all its splendour in the winter when great extensions of salt accumulate.

Southern plains. The geography of the south of the province is integrated with its nature of unlimited horizons, sand dunes, pastures and more than 170 water mirrors, where pejerrey fishing takes place. In this context we find the Ranquel Nation People, a community that was established after the restitution of their lands by the Government of San Luis.

CLIMATE

It is generally dry continental with an average annual temperature of 17 °C, an average winter temperature of 8 °C and a summer temperature of 24 °C. Rainfall decreases from east to west and falls mainly in summer, between October and March. In winter, it is almost non-existent and may fall as snow at any altitude, but especially in the sierras above 1000 m sl.

In the mountainous area, the biome is arid of sierras and fields, although on the eastern slopes of the sierras there is a temperate biome, which is more humid than the previous one, since the foothills of the sierras act as a condensation front for the Atlantic wind.

In the Conlara Valley area there is a very special microclimate, characterised by the high natural negative ionisation of the air, with a high ozone content that has very beneficial effects on health.
